The TITOGRAD (Y46/M 06) civil airfield was located at the southern border of the town. This field had an unoccupied 20 x 66 x 100-foot hangar at the northern edge of the field, two quartering buildings for guard personnel, a radio station with a 50-foot mast and a fuel dump at the western border, and a DF at the southern border. The field served as an intermediate landing field for commercial aircraft of the BELGRADE-SARAJEVO-TITOGRAD-PIRANA route. One or two twin-engine "Douglas" aircraft daily landed there.

Comment: The location of the airfield agrees with the report supplied [REDACTED] De 25X1A on the airfield buildings were received for the first time. An air unit is not assumed to be stationed at the airfield. Besides the civil airfield a military airfield is also located south-southwest of the town.
